

TERM LIMITS.

Peter Newberry
Democratic Congressional Candidate for Kentucky's Fourth District

I believe term limits are a major answer to corruption, wasteful spending, and the stranglehold of special interests on national interests.

George Washington served his country and went home. The great Roman Cincinnatus served his country and went home. After his presidency Harry Truman drove himself and Bess back home to Missouri. You serve to the best of your abilities ... and you go home. Politics should be a period of dedicated service, not a career.

Today's career politicians have it backwards: their goal is to stay in office forever, which takes hugely expensive non-stop campaigning. Keeping the money flowing means becoming a puppet of special interests.

Do Good and Come Home.

The Benefits of Term Limits:

No more endless & expensive campaigns. Serve your constituents, go home.

Politicians who represent the Fourth District. YOUR VOTE puts them in office, NOT money from across the country.

Reduced waste. Endless campaigns need big money to keep career politicians in office. In turn, they vote our hard-earned money to their backers' special projects. We have all seen the results: Billion Dollar No-Bid Contracts, Bridges to Nowhere, $10,000 toilet seats, $5,000 hammers, etc.

An end to governmental dysfunction. A bickering and dysfunctional legislative process benefits career politicians, who don't have to evaluate, plan, or do anything recognizable as honest work. So they can campaign endlessly

Ideas judged on merit. Powerful ideas require sticking one's neck out, which might cost re-election votes. Honest thought angers special interests, who turn off the money. Term limits frees legislators to think on their own.

Reduced partisan gridlock. No party has all the solutions. In the less-partisan past, good folks across the political spectrum solved complex problems together. We can get there again.

An end to political theater. The vast majority of what Congress does today is meaningless showmanship: proposing go-nowhere legislation to raise money and score political points. Term limits means legislators perform hard work instead of political theater.

A smaller, more efficient government. With term-limited lawmakers judging legislation on merits instead of political paybacks, failed, money-sucking programs will disappear.

VOTE NOV 4

NEWBERRY
for
NEW BRIDGE
No Tolls

U.S. Congress, Kentucky's 4th District

The Brent Spence Bridge:
Yes to bridge, No to tolls.

My opponent doesn't believe in federal funding to replace the crumbling bridge, saying there is no magic pot of money" available. He has "no constraint" on considering tolls.

Magic money? Tolls? This is our tax money coming home. The I-75 bridge is vital to local and national economies as well as national defense. The number one legislative priority for Kentucky's Fourth Congressional District Representative is replacing the Brent Spence Bridge.

We Pay Taxes . . .

We Shouldn't Pay Tolls.

It's Service, Not a Career.

The power is in your hands.

Members of the House of Representatives should serve a single six-year term. Senators should also serve once. One office, one term. No re-election campaigns.

Career politicians should not be rewarded by special legislation giving themselves life-long pensions and special health care and insurance.

Eliminating the stay-in-office-forever politician ends the root of dysfunction. Gone are power-hungry, ego-driven career politicians, replaced by honorable men and women who serve constituency and country. Gone are the special interests who now pay for the multi-million dollar re-election campaigns that keep the career politicians in power forever to serve their special interests.
