AFTER BENEFIZCONCERT

Official reporting to our donators!

Dear all

On March 3rd, I reported in Grevenmacher to our wonderful sponsors at the Regionale Maacher Musekschoul. I informed about the progress at the Day Care Center launched in Mets Masrik, Armenia, following their generous donations. The funds will be used to pay the salary of a doctor, psychologist and a physiotherapist who care the 40+ children with special needs.

Charity work is all about passion, love, altruism, compassion, understanding, tolerance, hope, generosity ... just to name a few of the extraordinary human capacities one must possess to fulfill such vocation.

But charity work is also solidly linked to transparency, trust and management skills, motivational skills, vision, guidance, knowledge, counseling and above all, one must have the capacity to honor and constantly pay tribute to those who have decided to donate their money to us.

We have the obligation and full responsibility to keep all donators updated. We also must build a bridge between the donators and those who receive the funds. We must prove all steps, big or small, any donation, big or small, any action towards compassion are steps towards a better world!

Keeping the faith and the guarantee that nothing was in vain are probably the most challenging of all our tasks.

Charity work is a life-long engagement, a commitment. It's like having a baby. You must follow the project at every step. Make sure it grows in a healthy way. Protecting it from failure. Feeding it with love, respect and active guidance.

As a philanthrop myself, I sometimes live with huge disappointments towards the institutions I have trusted my donations to. They turn their back when there is no more to receive. I have been lied at. My kind heart has been misused. Despite so many poor people I helped in Armenia, so many families with disabled children.

But this painful experience has helped me to understand the essence of charity. Now that I am on the other side, on the side of the charity worker, I know exactly how to respond to the expectations that such a vocational profession requires. I know how it feels when you give with confidence. I know the risk one takes when you trust a person with your donation.

So today I rejoice to say that this grave deception in Armenia gave me my most powerful tool: Armenia bleeds, I know how to help heal her. My devotion for my country and people is complete and eternal.

Armenia needs us, please join us!
